FAMILIAR QUOTATIONS. The famous phrase "a wise and masterly inactivity," which was used by John C. Calhoun, and previously by John Randolph, is against William E. > terly inactivity." "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," is often quoted as a verse of Scripture, but it is from Sterne's "Sentimental Journey," though not original with him, as it occurs in George Herbert's Jacula Prudentum, "To a close shorn sheep God gives wind by measure;" and more literally in a French collection of proverbs (Henri Estienne, "Premi-shorn sheep." "Men use language to conceal their thoughts," which has been ascribed to Talleyrand, and to Goldsmith, is here referred to Young, (Satire ii., line 207): Where nature's end of language is declined, And men talk only to conceal their mind. The phrase was also employed by Voltaire, "Men use words only to disguise their thoughts." Cowper's familiar line, "God made the country, and man made the town," appears originally in Cowley with still stronger antithesis - "God the first garden made, and the first city Cain." So also Cowper's panegyric on tea, "the cups that cheer, but not inebriate," was first applied by Bishop Berkely in his "Siris" to the sovereign virtues of the tar water, "It is of a nature so mild and benign upon the failure of the purchaser to comply and proportioned to the human constitution, as to warm without heating, to cheer but not inebriate." Wordsworth's "The child is father to tho man" is hinted at in Milton's "Paradise Re-popular catch-word, "There's a gade time coming" (Rob Roy, ch. 32.) "The Almighty Dollar" is the expression of Washington Irving.
